The following steps show you how to use the steps on the right to accomplish the task on the left. (You can see an image similar to this on the CD that accompanies the book.) 1. Using a rectangular selection tool, select the face from the figure on the left. (I used the Rounded Rectangle tool). 2. Click the Create Clipping Mask button. 3. On the Create Clipping Mask dialog box, make sure that Transparent is selected, as shown in Figure 14-5. 4. Click OK. 5. Click the Select tool and make a selection around the image of the figure on the left. 6. Press Ctrl+D (+D on the Mac) to deselect the image. 7. Press Ctrl+C (+C on the Mac) to copy the image. 8. Open the image on the right in Photoshop. FIGURE 14-5: Create a clipping mask by choosing Transparent in the Image window. 9. Open the Layer window and click the New Layer button to open the New Layer dialog box. 10. Type a descriptive name for the layer (for example, Figure 14-6; this is done in the Layer Name text box). 11. Click OK to create a new layer on the Image window. FIGURE 14-6: It's easier to create a new layer from a new window. The process of creating a layer is just one way to do it. You can also double-click the layer name in the Layers panel. 12. Select the foreground color, which appears in the foreground of the new layer, by clicking its color box and then click the color swatch in the Color panel. 13. Duplicate the layer by pressing Ctrl+J (+J on the Mac) on the keyboard. Rename the duplicate layer, if desired, by typing the new name and pressing Enter. 14. Right-click the layer in the Layers panel and choose Edit Floating Settings from the menu that appears. 15. Choose Create New Fill. 16. Choose 100 percent Opacity from the new Fill dialog box. (The process takes place in the settings shown on the right in Figure 14-7.) 17. Click OK. FIGURE 14-7: In the Create New Fill dialog box, make sure that Opacity is set to 100

Adobe Photoshop is a photo editing and retouching program used to remove, add or change images. It was developed by Adobe Systems and introduced in 1994. In 2000 Adobe acquired the product, and renamed it Photoshop, and released it as a standalone application and as part of Photoshop CS, Photoshop Elements, Acrobat or Adobe Certified Technical Specialist (ACTS) certification. Photoshop A common misconception is that the name Photoshop, Inc. refers to Adobe as a company. However, the letters "S.P.I.R." in the name are an acronym for South Pacific Pictures Inc. or South Pacific Pictures Rental, an Eastman Kodak Company department during the 1970s. During this time, Eastman Kodak produced a color negative film processing system using digital sensors. The digital images produced were viewed on a computer monitor and printed on a laser printer using a thermal printer. If it made sense to file the files from the negative film with a cryptic acronym, S.P.I.R. chose "Photoshop." Eastman Kodak then spun off from the Kodak company in 1988, originally with the intention of creating software for the emerging desktop publishing market. Because of this, the company hired a team of Apple Macintosh engineers. The first Photoshop development took place between 1988 and 1990, with the release of Photoshop 1.0 in 1990. Four Photoshop versions came out in 1990. Elements 1.0 was released in 1991; Photoshop Album was created in 1991; Photoshop was released as a standalone application in 1992; and Photoshop 3D was released in 1993. Adobe Photoshop was meant to make desktop publishing and photography easy. This led to the release of the first versions of the program in the early 1990s and this program was named Photoshop. Adobe created a design program for people who wanted to make changes on their own pictures and this design program was named Photoshop. In 2006, Adobe renamed Photoshop to Photoshop CS2 and it also changed the name of the application to Photoshop Creative Suite 2. Adobe dropped the CS from the name in the version 2.4. After that, the program became Photoshop Elements. Photoshop is the most popular photo editing program. It can be used to change or edit pictures in different ways. A photo editor uses a sequence of tools to change, crop, color, or adjust the sharpness, brightness and contrast. Tools The toolkit contains a range of tools, most of which are grouped together in palettes. Elements can also be used 05a79cecff

Distort lets you deform, scale and rotate your images. The Pen lets you draw and alter images. The Paths tool lets you draw polylines or vector shapes, and make them move along a fixed path. You can use the Pen Tool or Airbrush to fill the Path and apply it to another area of your image. The Selection Brush allows you to draw and copy specific areas of your images. There are a variety of selection tools that help you to select or modify areas in your images. The Eraser can be used to erase areas of an image that you have created with the Pen Tool or the Selection Brush. The Stroke Selection helps you to paint over an image in order to select only a specific object or area. The Eraser can be used to remove entire areas of an image. The Free Transform function lets you stretch, expand or compress an image. You can also add a black background to your image. Going to Wal-Mart Photo for the holiday photos? Q: jQuery: how to get a src of an image from another page inside a div? I'm trying to get the source of an image within a div using jQuery. What I have now: `$('#img_wrapper a').each(function(){ alert($(this).attr('href')); });` I'm using this code to loop through all the images inside the div with id `img_wrapper` and alert the src. What I want to do: I want to get the source of the image inside that div's a tag, so that I can then show that image. I'm trying to do this from the a tag's href. So I can turn any page into an image. I'm doing this as a part of my project for my school. Hope someone can help, Alex A: You can use the `attr` method to get the src value like this: `$('#img_wrapper a')[0].href` A: you must use a selector, there should be no # in your selector `$('#img_wrapper a').each(function(){ alert($(this).attr('href')); });`; no need for the following line `$('#img_wrapper a').each(function(){` can be written as `$('.img').each(function){` working example Tatiana Navka Tatiana Navka (, born March 14, 1982 in Minsk, Belarus) is a Belarusian female curler.
